

GEOGRAPHY (GEO)

GEO 130 Principles of Geography (3 Credits)

Survey of the basic factors that explain the interactions and adaptations of human beings with their environments. Critical thinking and writing competencies are introduced and emphasized.

GEO 130H Honors Principles of Geography (3 Credits)

Survey of the basic factors that explain the interactions and adaptations of human beings with their environments. Critical thinking and writing competencies are introduced and emphasized.

GEO 141 World Regional Geography (3 Credits)

Contact the department for specific course information.

GEO 336 Political Geography (3 Credits)

Examination of the relationship between politics and territory including how natural environments, distributions of populations and resources, levels of technological developments influence political decisions and the world geographic realms.

GEO 337 Geography of Africa (3 Credits)

Study of the natural regions of the continent, the physical and human resources and activities, the urban centers and economic and political problems and potentials. Emphasis on the analysis of problems and situations in regions and countries in the Islam

GEO 338 Caribbean Geography (3 Credits)

This course examines Caribbean cultural and, historical landscapes. The course will give an, overview of the cultures, environmental and, social issues, historical geography, geopolitics,, economics and social processes in the Caribbean. , Focus will be

GEO 360 Introduction to Gis (3 Credits)

Students will be introduced to the concepts and theories of geographical information systems. This course and program are not about learning any one piece of software or software training. Course emphasis is on creation, visualization and analysis of geog

GEO 366 Illicit and Illegal Geographies (3 Credits)

The concepts of "moral" and "legal" are socially defined and dynamic in nature. This course considers how social values associated with illicitness and illegality have ever-changing spatial expressions including conformity, concealment, resistance and tr

GEO 366H Honors Illicit and Illegal Geographies (3 Credits)

The concepts of "moral" and "legal" are socially defined and dynamic in nature. This course considers how social values associated with illicitness and illegality have ever-changing spatial expressions including conformity, concealment, resistance and tr

GEO 420 Disability Geographies (3 Credits)

This course examines how ability and disability shape each individual's experience in the world, and the spatial dimensions of that experience, issues of mobility, access, identity and citizenships, and how they are affected by discrimination and social m

GEO 430 Geography of Atlantic World Slavery (3 Credits)

This course examines the spatial expression of slavery in Africa, Europe and the European New World colonies from 1450 onward. Focal topics will include 1) the role geographically played in the unique experience of enslaved people throughout the Atlantic

GEO 450 Cultural Geography (3 Credits)

There are two foci of this course: 1) to give the student an overview of cultural geography and its history considering major themes in the last century, and 2) to consider theories, themes and concepts associated with the "new" cultural geography of the